

My fellow Americans, today I want to remind you that the strength of our nation lies not in Washington, but in the homes, hearts, and hands of hardworking citizens like you. You are the backbone of our country. I have always believed in the people-the truck drivers, teachers, factory workers, and small business owners. You are the ones who make this nation move.

We are a nation built on liberty, law, and limitless ambition. We will not bow to globalism. We will not give up our sovereignty. We will keep fighting to protect your jobs, your values, and your way of life. Our country belongs to you-not the bureaucrats, not the elites. Together, we will bring back the American spirit. We will dream big, aim high, and never settle for anything less than victory. Together, we will make America greater than it has ever been!
