

Citizens of Russia, we are a nation with an indomitable spirit. For centuries, we have faced adversity with courage and determination. Today, we live in a world of complex challenges-from economic pressures to global instability. But Russia has always endured. We stand together as one people, committed to our values and our homeland.

We are investing in science, strengthening our defense, and ensuring that future generations inherit a Russia that is stronger, prouder, and more just. Let us remember that our strength lies in unity and discipline. Our traditions, our language, and our culture must be preserved and respected. I call upon every Russian citizen to contribute to the growth and well-being of our motherland. The future of Russia will be decided not by others, but by our own hands. Together, we will safeguard our sovereignty and our peace.