

Thank you, America. It has always been my honor to fight for the forgotten men and women of our country. From the very first day, I promised to put America first, and that is exactly what we did. We brought back our economy, rebuilt our military, and restored the spirit of American greatness. We renegotiated unfair trade deals, lowered taxes, and secured our borders.

This is the land of opportunity, and I believe with all my heart that our best days are yet to come. Together, we are one people, one family, and one glorious nation under God. We will always stand tall for freedom, for justice, and for the American Dream. As long as we keep our faith and love for this country, there is nothing we cannot accomplish. America will never be a nation of weakness. We are strong, brave, and we will win again and again. God bless you, and God bless the United States of America!
